

Sutton Hoo

by jj

Sutton Hoo is a burial site from the 7th century, when the Anglo Saxons ruled England.

It was in East Anglia and a woman asked some archaeologists to dig up a hill and there was a BIG SHIP.

It was discovered in the 1930s.

Someone called
king Rerald
died on a boat
in the 7th
century

In battle the warrior king used shield and sword.

© Birmingham Museum and Gallery

they fought the romans for loads of days.

they got food from rivers
or by growing them.

© Mandy Barrow, Woodlands Junior School

They lived in villages with fences to protect there land.

they had forest to chop trees so they can make cottages.

Enemies wouldn't get around .

THE END

